

PRISONERS' STRUGGLES

Prisoners' Justice Day 2024: A Call for Submissions Lindsay Jennings

To better document premature deaths by incarceration and their impacts, Tracking (In)Justice in collaboration with @kyapublishing and those directly impacted by deaths in custody, are working on a special project for Prisoners' Justice Day 2024. We are inviting submissions from across the country, from folks currently incarcerated, families who have lost someone while incarcerated, and from those who have lived experience of being incarcerated. In addition to a publication, these submissions will be shared during the Abolition Coalition's PJD TV 2024 broadcast on the 50th anniversary of Eddie Nalon's death alone in solitary confinement at Millhaven Institution on August 10th, 1974 which led to the first Prisoners' Justice Day (PJD) marked by imprisoned people demanding an end to deaths in custody and other carceral injustices a year later (see Gaucher, 1991). Please consult the graphics below for more information on submission themes and instructions.
